Organizations and employees now spend an average of 18,000 per year per employee for health costs, a 61% increase in 10 years. Every indicator projects these costs will double before 2030. This is an unsustainable path. These costs are the tip to an even bigger iceberg: the hidden costs of time out of the office, distraction, disengagement and turnover. The Healthy Workplace Nudge explains the findings of research on 100 large organizations that have tackled the problems of employee health costs and disengagement in five fresh ways. Well being leads to health and high performance. Wake up to the fact that 95% of traditional wellness programs fail to improve health or lower costs. Behavioral economics has become a new powerful tool to nudge healthy behavior. Healthy buildings are now cost effective and produce your strongest ROI to improving health. Leaders who develop healthy cultures achieve sustainable high performance and employee wellbeing. In addition to proving highly effective, these approaches represent a fraction of the cost sunk into traditional wellness and engagement programs. Unhealthy Work Peter Schnall,Marnie Dobson,Ellen Roskam,Ray Elling,2018-02-06 Work so fundamental to well being has its darker and more costly side Work can adversely affect our health well beyond the usual counts of injuries that we think of as occupational health The ways in which work is organized its pace and intensity degree of control over the work process sense of justice and employment security among other things can be as toxic to the health of workers as the chemicals in the air These work characteristics can be detrimental not only to mental well being but to physical health Scientists refer to these features of work as hazards of the psychosocial work environment One key pathway from the work environment to illness is through the mechanism of stress thus we speak of stressors in the work environment or work stress This is in contrast to the popular psychological understandings of stress which locate many of the problems with the individual rather than the environment In this book we advance a social environmental understanding of the workplace and health The book addresses this topic in three parts the important changes taking place in the world of work in the context of the global economy Part I scientific findings on the effects of particular forms of work organization and work stressors on employees health unhealthy work as a major public health problem and estimates of costs to employers and society Part II and case studies and various approaches to improve working conditions prevent disease and improve health Part III

First Responder Careers Expose Individuals to Higher Risks of Developing Trauma Some careers include a higher likelihood of experiencing traumatic events that can lead to the development of PTSD Serving in the military is a high risk factor for developing PTSD However combat veterans develop PTSD at different rates depending on the severity and length of exposure to traumatic experiences There are also high incidences of reported sexual harassment and sexual abuse in the military As a result the rates of PTSD are relatively high compared to the overall prevalence in the general population Not only can law enforcement officers experience direct threats and stressful conditions but they also regularly witness the devastating effects of assaults robberies kidnappings and violent events However individuals in this profession have lower than expected rates of PTSD surprisingly An estimated 20 percent overall may result from having access to counseling and rigorous pre employment screenings EMTs and paramedics are routinely exposed to life threatening incidents and have more health problems than individuals in other occupations PTSD rates in this group are as high as 20 percent PTSD prevalence in this profession is comparable to law enforcement Firefighters conduct paramedic activities and are the first responders to natural disasters Firefighting is a dangerous profession that exposes workers to stressful conditions and traumatic events ranging from threats to their safety and experiencing the devastating effects of catastrophes As a result the prevalence of PTSD in this group can be as high as 20 percent Volunteer firefighters may have even higher rates because they don t have access to the same level of support as career firefighters Healthcare workers especially those working in emergency rooms and intensive care units are also at higher risk For example nurses working in critical care units are more likely to develop PTSD than nurses in other groups In addition while senior level nurses report fewer PTSD symptoms than junior ones they report higher rates of burnout Finally healthcare workers exposed to patients that have experienced violence such as an assault victim are more likely to develop PTSD than surgeons who treat assault victims Rescue workers medical workers and volunteers who act as first responders

during disasters witness the aftermath of horrific events and can even become involved in severe traumatic events The prevalence of PTSD in these individuals has been estimated to be between 15 and 30 percent Journalists who work as war correspondents are at higher risk of being injured killed or kidnapped Their lifetime prevalence of PTSD which can be as high as 30 percent reflects their lack of access to support and PTSD treatment options Transit and train operators are frequently exposed to physical threats and witness suicide incidents such as person under train events Exposure to these traumatic and threatening circumstances can be a daily or weekly occurrence Bus drivers are more prone to PTSD because they have more direct contact with the general public than train drivers locked in secure train cabs In these high risk professions the incidence of trauma declines when policies are in place to debrief victims give victims immediate access to counseling and screen for individuals at high risk of having adverse reactions to traumatic conditions
