Ekoparken Djurgården Haga Ulriksdal:

The European City and Green Space Peter Clark, 2016-12-05 Recent years have seen sustained public debate and controversy over the greening of European cities associated with the environmental movement pressures of urban redevelopment and the promotional strategies of cities competing in a global market But the European debate over urban green space has a long history dating back to Victorian concerns for the green lungs of the city to combat the health and social problems caused by rapid population and industrial growth This book explores the multiplicity of green space developments in the modern city ranging over parks and commons garden suburbs and the cities in the park allotment gardens green belts and national urban parks It is concerned not only with the different types of green space but the many influences shaping their evolution from international planning ideas to the rise of modern day sport and leisure and the effects of the transport revolution No less vital in this story is the interaction of the many actors involved in the often fractious political process of creating green spaces architects and planners politicians developers and other businessmen NGOs and local residents This volume is particularly concerned with contexts how international planning ideas are transmitted and adapted in different European cities how the construction of green space is affected by local power structures and relationships and how ordinary people perceive and use green spaces quite often at variance with official designs The European City and Green Space looks at these and other issues through the prism of four metropolises London Stockholm Helsinki and St Petersburg All represent different types of North European city yet each has experienced distinctive economic political and cultural trajectories whilst also facing powerful challenges and problems of similar kinds with regard to green space This volume examines how each has responded to them and what patterns emerge

Why Cities Need Large Parks Richard Murray, 2021-12-06 The large parks and green infrastructure presented here illustrate the diverse uses and many benefits of large urban parks across 30 major cities Demand for large urban parks emerged at the height of the First Industrial Revolution in the mid 1800s when large urban parks represented new ideas of accessible public spaces often established on land previously owned by aristocracy royalty or the army They represented new ideas on how city life could be improved and how large green spaces could enhance urban citizens physical and psychological well being e g Birkenhead Park in Liverpool Bois de Boulogne in Paris Tiergarten in Berlin and Central Park in New York City Today large urban parks are habitats for biodiversity and spaces of climate change adaptation For people living in cities this biodiversity may represent high cultural recreational and aesthetic values but is also important for other aspects of health and well being for example by reducing the urban heat island effect air pollution and risks of flooding At a time when we are seriously reconsidering how we live in cities and our urban quality of life while also grappling with serious challenges of climate change the authors of this book detail the much needed evidence pathways and vision for a future of more liveable resilient cities where large urban parks are at the core This book will help park managers NGOs landscape architects and city
