Feeman, 2002 Every map is a tool a product of human effort and creativity that represents some aspects of our world or universe This course was powered by the belief that by exploring the mathematical ideas involved in creating and analyzing maps students would see how mathematics could help them to understand and explain their world from the Preface Portraits of the Earth exemplifies the AMS's mission to bring the power and vitality of mathematical thought to the nonexpert It is designed to teach students to think logically and to analyze the technical information that they so readily encounter every day Maps are exciting visual tools that we encounter on a daily basis from street maps to maps of the world accompanying news stories to geologic maps depicting the underground structure of the earth This book explores the mathematical ideas involved in creating and analyzing maps a topic that is rarely discussed in undergraduate courses It is the first modern book to present the famous problem of mapping the earth in a style that is highly readable and mathematically accessible to most students Feeman's writing is inviting to the novice yet also interesting to readers with more mathematical experience Through the visual context of maps and mapmaking students will see how contemporary mathematics can help them to understand and explain the world Topics explored are the shape and size of the earth basic spherical geometry and why one can't make a perfect flat map of the planet The author discusses different attributes that maps can have and determines mathematically how to design maps that have the desired features The distortions that arise in making world maps are quantitatively analyzed There is an in depth discussion on the design of numerous map projections both historical and contemporary as well as conformal and equal area maps Feeman looks at how basic map designs can be modified to produce maps with any center and he indicates how to generalize methods to produce maps of arbitrary surfaces of revolution Also included are end of chapter exercises and laboratory projects Particularly interesting is a chapter that explains how to use MapleR add on software to make maps from geographic data points This book would make an excellent text for a basic undergraduate mathematics or geography course and would be especially appealing to the teacher who is interested in exciting visual applications in the classroom It would also serve nicely as supplementary reading for a course in calculus linear algebra or differential geometry Prerequisites include a solid grasp of trigonometry and basic calculus R Waterloo Maple Inc Ontario Canada A World of Difference, 2009-08-07 Widely regarded as the standard text on development geography this volume examines the nature and causes of global inequality and critically analyzes contemporary approaches to economic development across the third world Students gain a deeper understanding of the interacting dynamics of culture gender race and class biophysical factors such as climate population and natural resources and economic and political processes a all of which have led to the present day disparities between the first and third worlds Numerous examples sidebars and figures illustrate how people in the global South are experiencing and contesting the forces of globalization New to This Edition Updated to reflect a decade of economic political and social changes Extensively revised more fully integrates postcolonial

Geography and Enlightenment David N. Livingstone, Charles W. J. Withers, 1999-12-15 Geography and Enlightenment explores both the Enlightenment as a geographical phenomenon and the place of geography in the Enlightenment From wide ranging disciplinary and topical perspectives contributors consider the many ways in which the world of the long eighteenth century was brought to view and shaped through map and text exploration and argument within and across spatial and intellectual borders The first set of chapters charts the intellectual and geographical contexts in which Enlightenment ideas began to form including both the sites in which knowledge was created and discussed and the different means used to investigate the globe Detailed explorations of maps created during this period show how these new ways of representing the world and its peoples influenced conceptions of the nature and progress of human societies while studies of the travels of people and ideas reveal the influence of far flung places on Enlightenment science and scientific credibility The final set of chapters emphasizes the role of particular local contexts in Enlightenment thought Contributors are Michael T Bravo Paul Carter Denis Cosgrove Stephen Daniels Matthew Edney Anne Marie Claire Godlewska Peter Gould Michael Heffernan David N Livingstone Dorinda Outram Chris Philo Roy Porter Nicolaas

Rupke Susanne Seymour Charles Watkins and Charles W J Withers Rivers of the World James Penn, 2001-12-12 Rivers of the World vividly written and meticulously researched is a rich and thorough treatment of some 200 of the world's rivers. In this comprehensive treatment of the major rivers of the world, author James R. Penn's purpose is not just to feature geographic data but to tell a story of historical drama, poetic significance, and cultural relationships. The book shows glimpses of Chairman Mao boosting his image by swimming in the Yangtze, Indian middlemen residing on both sides of the Columbia River exacting tolls from travelers like Lewis and Clark, and near the Dordogne in southwest France, Paleolithic cave art, paintings, and designs in rock shelters and subterranean caverns, which are textbook examples of early human creativity and artistic impulse. In nearly 200 entries ranging from a few paragraphs to several pages, Rivers of the World covers all of the great rivers of the world, including the Nile, Niger, Amazon, and Mississippi, as well as smaller waterways that illustrate important themes or represent trends. The book includes bibliographies for each river. Siberian Village Bella Bychkova Jordan, 2001
