After two years with Coker who wanted Mr. Bushy to continue with him, the Bushy family moved to Halston in the Fall of 1934. At Halston, Earl Bushy and his father began a draying and freighting business and at the same time the father was doing veterinary work. It was not long until the father was chosen for a policeman at Halston, and by that time the boys were large enough to keep the draying business going. The family ran the combination business for several years at Halston.

There was a great deal of building going on in the late 30's so Earl learned the plaster and painting trade. He worked at his trade at Halston for a short time when the family decided to move to Hominy as Hominy was building faster than Halston. The move was made and the father did only veterinary work at Hominy until his death in 1937.

Earl continued his trade in Hominy until three years ago when he was selected as night marshal at Hominy which position he now holds.

[*] Probably the name is Coker - 31.
