

patient and family education, health promotion and rehabilitation. To achieve this holistic care process, participation by the patient and his/her family is always emphasized. At the forefront of critical care science and technology, critical care nurses maintain professional competence based on a broad base of knowledge and experience through continuous education and evidence-based research.

With advances in sophisticated biomedical technology and knowledge, critical care nurses are able to continuously monitor and observe patients for physiological changes to confront problems proactively and to assist patients to achieve and maintain an optimum level of functioning or a peaceful death.

In other words, this nursing philosophy of the CCNAPI is accomplished by looking after critically ill patient in an environment with specially trained nurses, appropriate equipment, adequate medical supplies and auxiliary health care personnel.

3. GOALS OF CRITICAL CARE NURSING

Critical or intensive care is a complex specialty developed to serve the diverse health care need of patients (and their families) with actual or potential life threatening conditions⁷. It is therefore important that a clear statement of what critical care nursing wish to achieve and provide should be articulated.

Goals of critical care nursing include the following:

- To promote optimal delivery of safe and quality care to the critically ill patients and their families by providing highly individualized care so that the physiological dysfunction as well as the psychological stress in the ICU are under control
- To care for the critically ill patients with a holistic approach, considering the patient's biological, psychological, cultural and spiritual dimensions regardless of diagnosis or clinical setting.
- To use appropriate and up-to-date knowledge, caring attitude and clinical skills, supported by advanced technology for prevention, early detection and treatment of complications in order to facilitate recovery.
- To provide palliative care to the critically ill patients in situations where their health status is progressing to unavoidable death, and to help the patients and families to go through the painful sufferings.

On the whole, critical care nursing should be patient-centered, safe, effective, and efficient. The nursing interventions are expected to be delivered in a timely and equitable manner.

4. SCOPE CRITICAL CARE NURSING

The scope of critical care nursing is defined by the dynamic interaction of the critically ill patient, the critical care nurse and the critical care environment in order to bring about optimal patient outcomes through nursing proficiency within an environment conducive to the provision of this highly specialized care⁸.
