

Essay Sample: Core Values and Ethical Principles of Social Work Essay

Introduction

The social work core values determine the competency of social work alongside the corresponding principles. Thus, before engaging in the social work profession, individuals have to ensure they consider the values that can help them conduct operations in the field with due ethical considerations. The social work profession requires many values that correspond to ethical principles because social workers have various responsibilities and tasks to undertake while serving clients. Therefore, their competence in interpersonal communication skills is related to the ethical principles and core values that a social worker has to consider while serving different clients they interact with at work. Daily, social workers strive to ensure that human rights are upheld, and they are in apposition to get quality service whenever they need any form of assistance. By serving people, social workers contribute to ensuring that people live comfortably and free from various forms of injustice that might deny them the right to live freely. This paper will explore the six core values and ethical principles concerning social; work within contemporary society and manifest in the individual daily life.

Service

Social workers' primary goal and objective are to ensure that they can address all primary challenges people face and help people within society. Service is the stem from which the other forms of social work originate. Social work revolves around serving others and ensuring that they get satisfaction and solutions to their needs. In most cases, social workers try to ensure that they can elevate their interests towards ensuring that they can use their skills to serve others and relieve them from the social challenges they might be facing at any given time (Barsky, 2019).

As a social worker, the value fits into my daily life while undertaking routine social work tasks in the field. For instance, as a social worker, I volunteer to spend time serving clients without any expectation of financial reward or any form of appreciation that can help them feel appreciated and put effort into the ways of services they deliver within society. Therefore, I agree that service is an essential value that every social worker has to portray. I would also aim to devise more frameworks for effectively showcasing the value in every undertaking within my line of duty.

Social Justice

Social workers stand in to ensure that they advocate for those who are lowly regarded within the community to ensure they get social services equally. In most cases, social workers focus on general social challenges that include discrimination, harassment, and other different forms of injustice that people face within society. Social workers educate people on how they can avoid social injustices and give those guidelines that can help them effectively participate in social development without discrimination (Mapp et al., 2019).
