Tucker,1994 Unlike other critiques of the scientific literature on racial difference The Science and Politics of Racial Research argues that there has been no scientific purpose or value to the study of innate differences in ability between groups William Tucker shows how for more than a century scientific investigations of supposedly innate differences in ability between races have been used to rationalize social and political inequality as the unavoidable consequence of natural differences Tucker structures his work chronologically with each chapter describing how research on genetic difference was used in a particular era to support a particular political agenda He begins with the use of science to support slavery in the mid nineteenth century and ends with the effects of Jensenism in the 1970s Highlights include one chapter describing a little known but concerted attempt by a group of scientists to overturn the Brown v Board of Education decision on the basis of expert testimony about racial differences and another that presents a review of the eugenics movement in the twentieth century The author also considers how to balance the rights and responsibilities of scientists concluding that one generally neglected method is to strengthen the rights of research subjects Current Bibliography of Epidemiology ,1972 Research Involving Prisoners United States. extensions to expose more about what works best for whom Social experiments are also putting programs under the microscope when they are most ready for testing enhancing the policy value of their findings This volume provides new developments in all these areas from scholars instrumental to recent scientific advances In some instances established ideas are given new attention connecting them to new opportunities to learn and inform policy By all means this issue aims to encourage stronger and more informative social experiments in the future This is the 152nd issue in the New Directions for Evaluation series from Jossey Bass It is an official publication of the American Evaluation Association
