Genetic Regulation Of Development:

Genetic Regulation of Development Society for Developmental Biology. Symposium, 1987 Genetic Regulation of Development William F. Loomis, 1987-04-24 Uncovering the functions of genes is the key to understanding the rules that govern the development similarities and differences among organisms and the way in which traits are passed on from one generation to another The central theme of this volume is genetic analysis at both the molecular and phenotypic levels emphasizing the simpler organisms e g yeast Contributions represent the latest findings in yeast research and explore their relevance and importance in developmental biology as a whole Coverage includes an examination on how specific regulatory proteins interact with genes that determine segment specification differential adhesion and growth in Drosophila compartments differentiation in unicellular organisms such as Neurospora Aspergillus Chlamydomonas and others gene responses to environmental clues the application of monoclonal antibodies and microscopy in the field and directions for future research Development V.E.A. Russo, D.J. Cove, L.G. Edgar, R. Jaenisch, F. Salamini, 2012-12-06 Studies of selected model organisms have led to a greatly improved understanding not only of the molecular events which take place during development under the control of specific sets of genes but also of epigenetic and environmental influences on these processes This book gives an overview of all three of these levels and their relative importance and as such will give the reader a clear picture of one of the most exciting areas of current biological research Gene Expression at the Beginning of Animal Development M.L. DePamphilis, 2002-09-30 The beginning of life may be a miracle to some and a mystery to others but it is certainly one of the most exciting and perhaps controversial fields of scientific investigation in the 21st century Among the metazoa life begins when an egg is fertilized by a sperm The sperm provides a genetic blueprint from the father and perhaps some critical proteins The egg provides a genetic blueprint from the mother together with a large reservoir of mRNAs and proteins that are required for DNA replication cell division and the onset of zygotic gene expression All of the thousands of genes in these two mature gametes are transcriptionally silent and remain so until fertilization This work focuses on three biological systems providing the reader with a clear understanding of the current state of affairs and the ability to identify common principles as well as critical differences that are responsible for beginning the process of animal development The essays presented will be of practical value to all those who are interested in improving fertilization in vitro in designing novel methods of contraception in developing preimplantation genetic diagnosis for various diseases in cloning animals by transplanting nuclei from adult cells to an enucleated egg and in the application of embryonic stem cells to curing genetic diseases or replacing damaged tissues But above all this volume is offered to those who simply have an insatiable curiosity about life and its beginnings Gene Interactions in Development L. I. Korochkin, 2012-12-06 Since the Russian edition of this book was published in 1975 many new research works have appeared which have made necessary some additions for the English edition to reflect progress in molecular developmental genetics

Recent important findings in this field have brought about essential corrections to the concept of genetic regulation of the process of cell differentiation. The discovery of the mosaic structure of a gene prompted the re-evaluation of our considerations about the regulation of gene activity in eukaryotes and the data about transcriptional events during ontogenesis are of great importance as well. Formerly it was generally accepted that a derepression of genes was responsible for cell differentiation in the process of development. Recently three important conclusions have been derived (Davidson and Britten 1979) which help to pose the problem in a new way:

1. Only a small part of single copy sequences of DNA is represented in nuclear RNA of a given type of cell or tissue: 10% to 20% in sea urchin embryos, 11% in rat liver, 4% to 6% in Drosophila cell culture etc.

Since only about 10% of single copy sequences represent the structural genes (Davidson and Britten 1973), transcription of almost the whole set of structural genes occurs.

Ingenious Genes Roger Sansom, 2011-09-30

A proposal for a new model of the evolution of gene regulation networks and development that draws on work from artificial intelligence and philosophy of mind. Each of us is a collection of more than ten trillion cells busy performing tasks crucial to our continued existence. Gene regulation networks consisting of a subset of genes called transcription factors control cellular activity producing the right gene activities for the many situations that the multiplicity of cells in our bodies face. Genes working together make up a truly ingenious system. In this book Roger Sansom investigates how gene regulation works and how such a refined but simple system evolved. Sansom describes in detail two frameworks for understanding gene regulation. The first developed by the theoretical biologist Stuart Kauffman holds that gene regulation networks are fundamentally systems that repeat patterns of gene expression. Sansom finds Kauffman's framework an inadequate explanation for how cells overcome the difficulty of development. Sansom proposes an alternative: the connectionist framework. Drawing on work from artificial intelligence and philosophy of mind, he argues that the key lies in how multiple transcription factors combine to regulate a single gene acting in a way that is qualitatively consistent. This allows the expression of genes to be finely tuned to the variable microenvironments of cells. Because of the nature of both development and its evolution, we can gain insight into the developmental process when we identify gene regulation networks as the controllers of development. The ingenuity of genes is explained by how gene regulation networks evolve to control development.

Developmental Biology of Teleost Fishes Gaurav Shekhar, 2025-02-20

Developmental Biology of Teleost Fishes offers a comprehensive exploration of the intricate biological processes in teleost fish development. Authored by leading experts, this book delves into the fascinating world of teleost fishes, highlighting their diverse evolutionary history, reproductive strategies, and physiological adaptations. We provide deep insights into the genetic regulation, environmental influences, and developmental plasticity that shape the life history of teleost fishes. Through detailed discussions and engaging illustrations, the book explores the role of teleost fishes as model organisms in biomedical research, offering valuable parallels to human health and disease. Additionally, we examine practical applications in aquaculture and fisheries.

management and environmental conservation With its thorough coverage and interdisciplinary approach Developmental Biology of Teleost Fishes is an essential resource for researchers educators and students interested in the biology ecology and evolution of teleost fishes This book offers a wealth of knowledge and inspiration for understanding the remarkable diversity of teleost fishes Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research ,1987 Research Awards Index ,1989

Transcription Factors EGL-38, VAB-3, and LIN-14 Ryan William Johnson,2008 Abstract Sequence specific transcription factors are crucial to generating the gene expression patterns that drive the specification morphogenesis and physiology of organs and tissues In order to better understand how organ form and function are orchestrated by transcription factors we must better understand the genetic inputs and outputs of these critical regulators In this work I have utilized C elegans to characterize the genetic networks and organ functions of three post embryonically functioning transcription factors The Pax family of transcription factors is highly conserved across animal species and controls the development of multiple tissues and organs during development. In C. elegans males, two sensory mating structures, the copulatory spicules and the post-cloacal sensilla, are formed from stereotyped divisions of the two post-embryonic blast cells, B_a and Y_p, respectively. A C. elegans pax-6 transcript, vab-3, is necessary for the development of these sensory structures. Using a green fluorescent protein (GFP)-based vab-3 transcriptional reporter, I found that expression is restricted to the sensory organ lineages of B_a and Y_p. Transcription of vab-3 in the tail region of the worm requires the Abdominal B homeobox gene egl-5. Opposing this activation, a transcription factor cascade and a Wnt signaling pathway each act to restrict vab-3 expression to the appropriate cell lineages. Another C. elegans Pax gene, egl-38, is required for the development of the egg-laying system and rectum. However, few EGL-38 target genes are known. Using gene expression microarrays, we cross-referenced microarray data from an inducible EGL-38 strain and two egl-38 mutants that disrupt protein function in a tissue-preferential manner to identify potential tissue-specific EGL-38 target genes. One set of genes from this analysis was validated using GFP reporter transgenes. Most of these genes are expressed in egl-38-dependent tissues and many display egl-38 dependence. In addition to the identification of target genes, this work revealed enrichments in gene classes that play a role in innate immunity. Consistent with this, we discovered a novel immune function for egl-38. We found that the gene activities of egl-38 and three egl-38-responsive genes from our validation set are associated with increased infection by the pathogenic bacterium M. nematophilum. However, we also show that egl-38 does not impact infection by a different pathogen, S. marcescens. While Pax genes regulate spatial tissue/organ identity, some transcription factors regulate temporal identity. In C. elegans, heterochronic genes function to ensure the precise timing of stage-specific developmental events. I positionally cloned a novel missense allele of the heterochronic transcription factor LIN-14 and revealed a previously undiscovered ability of this protein to solely affect late larval development. lin-14 sa485 hermaphrodites exhibit asynchrony between vulval and gonadal morphogenesis and maturation. Further, lin-14 sa485 preferentially disrupts the timing of vulval cell morphogenesis but not cell division. I also show that terminal differentiation of a uterine cell type is delayed in lin-14 sa485 mutants.
