Ancient Christian Ecopoetics Virginia Burrus, 2018-09-14 In our age of ecological crisis what insights if any can we expect to find by looking to our past Perhaps suggests Virginia Burrus early Christianity might yield usable insights Turning aside from the familiar specter of Christianity s human centered theology of dominion Burrus directs our attention to aspects of ancient Christian thought and practice that remain strange and alien Drawn to excess and transgression in search of transformation early Christians creatively reimaged the universe and the human cultivating relationships with a wide range of other beings animal vegetable and mineral angelic and demonic divine and earthly large and small In Ancient Christian Ecopoetics Burrus facilitates a provocative encounter between early Christian theology and contemporary ecological thought In the first section she explores how the mysterious figure of khora drawn from Plato s Timaeus haunts Christian and Jewish accounts of a creation envisioned as varyingly monstrous unstable and unknowable In the second section she explores how hagiographical literature queers notions of nature and places the very category of the human into question in part by foregrounding the saint s animality in part by writing the saint into the landscape The third section considers material objects as small as portable relics and icons as large as church and monastery complexes Ancient Christians considered all of these animate beings simultaneously powerful and vulnerable protective and in need of protection lovable and loving Viewed through the shifting lenses of an ancient ecopoetics Burrus demonstrates how humans both loomed large and shrank to invisibility absorbed in the rapture of a strange and animate ecology
