

National Accreditation Organizations for Early Childhood Programs

Accreditation is a voluntary process designed to improve the quality of early and school-age care programs. Accreditation systems require programs to meet standards that exceed minimum State regulatory requirements. Achieving accreditation involves extensive self-study and validation by professionals outside the program to verify that quality standards are met. Research has demonstrated that accreditation positively impacts early and school-age care program quality, including benefits to children, families, and staff.

A number of organizations have developed accreditation systems to recognize programs that meet higher standards than those required by State regulations. The following is a sample of national accreditation systems for early and school-age care programs listed in alphabetical order.

The National Center on Child Care Quality Improvement does not endorse any non-Federal organization, publication, or resource.
