

Guide To Stream Trout Fishing on New York City Watershed Property in Westchester and Putnam Counties

Trout anglers will find many fine fishing opportunities on stream segments downstream of nine New York City Reservoirs. Combined these nine stream segments offer over 13 miles of publicly accessible trout water. In most cases brown trout are the most common species, while in others rainbow and sometimes even an occasional brook trout provide diversity. In recognition of the high quality habitat and excellent thermal regimes present in some of these tributaries the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation manages three of the best under "Artificial Lakes Only" regulations. In two cases there are creel with high size limits and low daily limits. In another we have employed a "No Kill" regulation. On all three of the streams the goal is to give trout additional protection, compared to the regular statewide regulations, in an effort to keep more fish in the stream and to allow more to reach larger sizes. Where natural spawning is especially significant the trout season runs from April 1 to September 30; others have longer seasons.

Some statistics and notes on the individual sections are as follows:

West Branch Croton River - Royal Corners Reservoir Outlet

Season - April 1 - October 15; Minimum length - any size; Daily limit - 5; Method - angling.

This section of the West Branch Croton River flows 0.5 miles from Royal Corners Reservoir to West Branch Reservoir. It is located in the Putnam County Town of Kent and is accessible from State Route 501. The stocking recommendation is for 500 yearling and 100 two year old (12-15 inches) brown trout to be stocked in March followed by 150 brown trout yearlings in April. Fishing is best in the spring but from mid-September to the end of the season on October 15 anglers fishing here may encounter large brown trout moving into the stream from West Branch Reservoir.

West Branch Croton River - West Branch Reservoir Outlet

Season - April 1 - September 30; Minimum length - 8 inches; Daily limit - 5; Method - angling.

This section of the West Branch Croton River flows 2.3 miles from West Branch Reservoir to Croton Falls Reservoir. It is located in the Putnam County Town of Carmel and is accessible from State Route 6 at the upstream end and Drewville Road (County Route 56) at the downstream end. This section is not stocked. Wild brown trout provide excellent season long fishing opportunity. Anglers who fish downstream of Route 6 or upstream of Drewville Road will be rewarded by a wild and scenic woodland setting. This section serves as a spawning and nursery stream for Croton Falls Reservoir brown trout.
