Flashpoints In Environmental Policymaking:

Flashpoints in Environmental Policymaking Sheldon Kamieniecki, George A. Gonzalez, Robert O. Vos, 1997-04-25 As a contribution to public policy and to help educate students about natural resource issues this book identifies the likely hot spots of environmental policy and presents alternative and often opposing points of view on the major controversies that are likely to be with us well into the next century Among the topics covered are comparative risk assessment market incentives in environmental regulation environmental justice public versus private management of public lands international trade and sustainable development and the relationship between national security and environmental protection      Environmental Policymaking Michael T. Hatch, 2012-02-01 The methods employed in the pursuit of environmental protection are often highly contested leading to alternative policy approaches This book details the frequently neglected topic of these alternative approaches to environmental policymaking through case studies drawn primarily from the United States Germany and Japan Among the policy instruments analyzed are eco audits voluntary agreements tradable permits green taxes environmental impact assessments and command and control regulations Also examined are international regulatory arrangements to encourage sustainable forestry management practices Various evaluative criteria are applied to each case study including environmental effectiveness economic and political efficiency administrative efficacy and technological innovation      New Principles in Planning Evaluation Abdul Khakee, Angela Hull, 2016-12-05 This book provides recently developed and tested methods for assessing the strengths and weaknesses of planning and policy options Several contributions focus on new substantive areas of concern in planning evaluation including environmental justice and sustainable urban development Applications of evaluation in several planning contexts are demonstrated and special problems that these pose are assessed Several chapters address how to communicate the process and results to several stakeholder groups and how to engage these groups in the evaluation process Each chapter employs a real world case in practice thus dealing with the complexity of applying planning evaluation and providing practical advice useful in similar situations      Urban Areas and Global Climate Change William Holt, 2012-10-12 Examining urban environmental issues at the macro municipal level down to the micro community and individual level this volume features cities and metropolitan regions across the global north and south with case studies from the United States Canada Eastern and Western Europe to India Central America South America and Africa      Competition, Choice, and Incentives in Government Programs Albert Morales, John M. Kamensky, 2006 Since the 1980s the language used around market based government has muddled its meaning and polarized its proponents and critics making the topic politicized and controversial Competition Choice and Incentives in Government Programs hopes to reframe competing views of market based government so it is seen not as an ideology but rather as a fact based set of approaches for managing government services and programs more efficiently and effectively      New Ways of Doing Business Mark A. Abramson, Ann M. Kieffaber, 2003-08-04 In their introduction the editors of New Ways of Doing Business assert that in retrospect it will be apparent that today's government that of the early years of the 21st century was undergoing its most significant transformation since the decade of the 1930s when direct government delivered services grew significantly as part of the New Deal. This newest volume in the IBM Endowment for the Business of Government series is an invaluable guide to navigating the sometimes controversial changes taking place in the internal operations of government: the delivery of services to citizens and the delivery of environmental programs. Possibly the most monumental change taking place in our modern government is the lessening allegiance to the old model of in-house or departmental performance of tasks. The new model asks how and by whom can the tasks of government best be performed. The answer sometimes lies with another inter-governmental department leading to an in-house atmosphere of healthy competition and entrepreneurship and sometimes with outside contractors. New Ways of Doing Business provides descriptions and guidelines for successfully navigating management under the new model. There are also dramatic new ways in which services to the public can now be delivered via the Internet via contracts with private organizations and via faith-based initiatives and business improvement districts. Experts provide valuable checklists and guidelines and case studies exploring the merits and disadvantages of these new service delivery routes. Finally, New Ways of Doing Business explores what the editors call one of the most highly experimental policy arenas in government: that of the delivery of environmental programs. The authors of these articles explain via case study analysis many of the innovative programs currently in existence and postulate that the traditional command and control stance of government to businesses will be superseded by a flexibility that will allow for increased eco-efficiency and attention to market-based regulatory tools.

Food Policy Tim Lang, David Barling, Martin Caraher, 2009-03-19. For over half a century food policy has mapped a path for progress based upon a belief that the right mix of investment, scientific input and human skills could unleash a surge in productive capacity which would resolve humanity's food-related health and welfare problems. It assumed that more food would yield greater health and happiness by driving down prices, increasing availability and feeding more mouths. In the 21st century this policy mix is quietly becoming unstuck. In a world marred by obesity alongside malnutrition, climate change alongside fuel and energy crises, water stress alongside more mouths to feed and social inequalities alongside unprecedented accumulation of wealth, the old rubric of food policy needs re-evaluation. This book explores the enormity of what the new policy mix must address, taking the approach that food policy must be inextricably linked with public health, environmental damage and social inequalities to be effective. Written by three authors with differing backgrounds: one in political science, another in environmental health and health promotion and the third in social psychology, this book reflects the myriad of perspectives essential to a comprehensive view of modern food policy. It attempts to make sense of what is meant by food policy, explores whether the term has any currency in current policy discourse, assesses whether current policies help or hinder, what happens, judges whether consensus can triumph in the face of competing bids for understanding, looks at all levels of governance across the range of actors in the food system from companies and the state to civil society and science considers what direction food policies are taking not just in the UK but internationally assesses who and what gains or loses in the making of these food policies and identifies a modern framework for judging how good or limited processes of policy making are This book provides a major comprehensive review of current and past food policy thinking and proposing the need for what the authors call an ecological public health approach to food policy Nothing less will be fit for the 21st century
