Economic Transformation In Rubia:

The Carpetbaggers of Kabul and Other American-Afghan Entanglements Jennifer L. Fluri, Rachel Lehr, 2017 The 2001 invasion of Afghanistan by United States and coalition forces was followed by a flood of aid and development dollars and experts representing well over two thousand organizations each with separate policy initiatives geopolitical agendas and socioeconomic interests This book examines the everyday actions of people associated with this international effort with a special emphasis on small players individuals and groups who charted alternative paths outside the existing networks of aid and development This focus highlights the complexities complications and contradictions at the intersection of the everyday and the geopolitical showing how dominant geopolitical narratives influence daily life in places like Afghanistan and what happens when the goals of aid workers or the needs of aid recipients do not fit the narrative Specifically this book examines the use of gender need and grief as drivers for both common and exceptional responses to geopolitical interventions Throughout this work Jennifer L Fluri and Rachel Lehr describe intimate encounters at a microscale to complicate and dispute the ways in which Afghans and their country have been imagined described fetishized politicized vilified and rescued The authors identify the ways in which Afghan men and women have been narrowly categorized as perpetrators and victims respectively They discuss several projects to show how gender and grief became forms of currency that were exchanged for different social economic and political opportunities Such entanglements suggest the power and influence of the United States while illustrating the ways in which individuals and groups have attempted to chart alternative avenues of interaction intervention and interpretation

Khojimatov,Yusufjon Gafforov,Rainer W. Bussmann,2023-08-25 Natural resources and associated biological diversity provide the basis of livelihood for humans particularly in rural areas and mountain regions around the world Over centuries indigenous peoples traditional societies and local communities have developed their own specific knowledge regarding plant use management and conservation The history of plant use by humans as food and to treat diverse ailments dates back to ancient civilizations Even though the advent of allopathic medicine has somehow minimized the role of medicinal plants in favor of synthetic drugs a number of modern drug discoveries have been based on medicinal plants used by indigenous peoples Ethnobiology is the burgeoning interdisciplinary scientific field which covers all sorts of interactions between plants and people and Central Asia is recognized as a plant diversity hot spot The mountains and valleys of this region are rich in unique medicinal and food plant species Local communities residing in the mountain regions of Central Asia possess unique knowledge of surrounding resources which is the result of many years of interaction with and selection of the most desirable and pervasive plant species present In this context this book provides comprehensive information on cross culture variation in the traditional uses of plants fungi and animal species as food medicine and for cultural purposes among the diverse communities of Uzbekistan The key areas of focus include plant diversity in Uzbekistan cross cultural variation in traditional uses of plant species high value medicinal and food plant species and threats and conservation status of plant species and traditional knowledge Ethnobotany of the Himalayas Ripu M. Kunwar,Hassan Sher,Rainer W. Bussmann,2021-07-29

Research in recent years has increasingly shifted away from purely academic research and into applied aspects of the discipline including climate change research conservation and sustainable development It has by now widely been recognized that traditional knowledge is always in flux and adapting to a quickly changing environment Trends of globalization especially the globalization of plant markets have greatly influenced how plant resources are managed nowadays While ethnobotanical studies are now available from many regions of the world no comprehensive encyclopedic series focusing on the world's mountain regions is available in the market. Scholars in plant sciences worldwide will be interested in this website and its dynamic content. The field and thus the market of ethnobotany and ethnopharmacology has grown considerably in recent years. Student interest is on the rise; attendance at professional conferences has grown steadily and the number of professionals calling themselves ethnobotanists has increased significantly. The various societies like the Society for Economic Botany, the International Society of Ethnopharmacology, the Society of Ethnobiology and the International Society for Ethnobiology currently have thousands of members. Growth has been most robust in BRIC countries. This new MRW on Ethnobotany of the Himalayas takes advantage of the increasing international interest and scholarship in the field of mountain research. It includes the best and latest research on a full range of descriptive, methodological, theoretical and applied research on the most important plants in the Himalayas. Each contribution is scientifically rigorous and contributes to the overall field of study.

Africa at the Beginning of the Twenty-first Century P. Godfrey Okoth, 2000. In an attempt to take stock of African affairs, this collection of essays addresses the most critical themes and pressing issues facing the continent at the outset of the new century. The perspective is broad; the approach generally interdisciplinary and the subjects wide-ranging and controversial. The work is broadly structured into three sections: socio-cultural transformation, governance and democratisation, and the global dimension. With the focus firmly on the future, amongst questions raised are post-industrialism and knowledge production, the recreation of Africa through language, the economic and cultural impact of AIDS, prospects for conflict resolution, Africa's place in the world, dialogue in the new century, and the potential role of the mass media.

Domestic Food Production and Political Conflict in Kenya Scott MacWilliam, France Desaubin, Wendy Timms, 1995. The Economics of Tourism Destinations Norbert Vanhove, 2017-12-04. The measurement of tourism, for example, analysing competitiveness and evaluating tourism projects is not an easy task. Now in its third edition, The Economics of Tourism Destinations: Theory and Practice provides a succinct guide to the economic aspects of tourism for students and practitioners alike to decipher the methods of measurement of supply, demand, trends and impacts. This new edition has been revised and updated to include three new chapters: Tourism as a development strategy, Tourism export-led growth, and a dedicated chapter on Macro evaluation of tourism projects and events, including the travel cost method and the contingent valuation method. New case studies from emerging destinations in Asia, Australia and America show theory in practice. Each chapter combines theory and practice and is integrated with international case studies. Combining macro and micro aspects of economics to the tourism destination, this is an invaluable resource for students learning about this subject as well as being aimed at tourism researchers and policy makers.

Ethnobotany of Northern Africa and Levant Rainer W. Bussmann, Mostafa Elachouri, Zaal Kikvidze, 2024-11-15. Research in recent years has increasingly shifted away from purely academic research and into applied aspects of the discipline, including climate change research, conservation and sustainable development. Beyond Capitalism versus Socialism in Kenya and Tanzania Joel D. Barkan, 1994

Transnational Mobilization and Domestic Regime Change H. Schmitz, 2006-03-13 Africa represents the next frontier of the transnational politics of democratization Recent efforts to promote human rights and democracy have yielded a mixed record of success A comparison of regime change in Kenya and Uganda reveals how principled interventions have unintentional adverse effects on the democratic reform process

Government and Rural Development in East Africa L. Cliffe, J.S. Coleman, M.R. Doornbos, 2012-12-06 The gestation period of this collection has been lengthy even by academic standards Some of our long suffering contributors prepared their original drafts for a workshop held in Nairobi in 1967 and although they have all updated their contributions they are still essentially reporting on research conducted in the late 1960s However we feel that their various findings and analyses of the issues they respectively treat have a continuing validity in our comprehension of the problem of rural development. Other contributions reporting on more recent work have been incorporated at different times since most of them not commissioned especially for this symposium but all adding something to our understanding of the problem. The slow accumulation of material which makes up this final collection parallels an evolution in our own collective thinking if indeed not that of most students of development over the past decade. The progression has not been towards final clarification of the complex and changing East African realities nor towards formulation of an accepted model for their analysis rather it has been marked by the questioning of the initial somewhat simplistic assumptions with which some of us started out and a continuing debate and widening polarization of views about the significance of that process of government penetration of the rural areas which is our focus about the positive or negative value of development policies in East Africa and indeed about the appropriate theoretical approaches to the study of development in general.
