Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Harmonic analysis is one of the core areas of modern analytical mathematics. Over the centuries, it has formed a huge subject system and has important and profound applications in the fields of mathematics, information processing, probability, and quantum mechanics.

This Special Issue, entitled “Recent Advances in Harmonic Analysis and Applications”, is devoted to collecting research papers on the recent progress in harmonic analysis, as well as some applications in various fields of mathematics, such as partial differential equations, probability, and geometry. We would like to invite original research articles that provide new results in this subject. All topics in harmonic analysis and related applications are welcome. In particular, the theory of Fourier and multilinear Calderón–Zygmund operators, real analysis, and abstract analysis, etc. Potential topics can be related, but are not limited, to the keywords listed below.
