

not in Kansas anymore, and we never will be again.

In fact, we live in a world that is transforming, and our challenge is how to deal with it more effectively under a totally new set of rules that we may not yet fully understand.

The science of discontinuous change

In 1982, Kuhn's¹¹ The Structure of Scientific Revolutions introduced the notion of the paradigm shift: a change in thinking, structure, and process so radical as to make things before and after the shift appear to have little or no relationship.

Morison's¹² The Second Curve: Managing the Velocity of Change, published in 1996, built on the concept of sudden paradigm transformations, offering a model that compared 20th-century healthcare—"the first curve"—with a radically different new paradigm that is coming into focus and redefining our world. Morison described this change as being in its infancy (it is perhaps now in its adolescence), allowing mere glimpses of what's to come. The transition from the first curve to the second will not be a constant continuum; nor will the transition point always be clear in the moment. But at the juncture of these curves is a maelstrom—something of a vortex, with a strong pull and downward draft. At the edge of this vortex are the most exciting and profitable opportunities for those leaders who have the vision and courage to ride the edge of the new curve, seeing the changes as they are emerging and beginning to stick. Shaping the future state is an advantage in staying ahead of the change curve.

Recognizing the need and having a desire to change simply aren't enough. There seems to be a silent conspiracy to keep doing things the way we have always done them. Even as we want to change the results our organizations achieve, the culture from the first curve continues to en-

Harvey A. K. Whitney (1904–1977) received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Michigan College of Pharmacy in 1923. He was appointed to the pharmacy staff of University Hospital in Ann Arbor in 1925 and was named Chief Pharmacist there in 1927. He served in that position for almost 20 years. He is credited with establishing the first hospital pharmacy internship program—now known as a residency program—at the University of Michigan in 1927.

Harvey A. K. Whitney was an educator, educator, practitioner, and hospital pharmacy leader. He was instrumental in developing a small group of hospital pharmacists into a subsection of the American Pharmaceutical Association and finally, in 1962, into the American Society of Hospital Pharmaci-

ans. He was the first ASHP President and coeditor, in 1963, of the Bulletin of the ASHP, which in 1974 became the American Journal of Hospital Pharmacy (now the American Journal of Health-System Pharmacy).

The Harvey A. K. Whitney Lecture Award was established in 1950 by the Michigan Society of Hospital Pharmacists (now the Southeastern Michigan Society of Health-System Pharmacists). Responsibility for administration of the award was accepted by ASHP in 1963, since that time, the award has been presented annually to honor outstanding contributions to the practice of hospital (now health-system) pharmacy. The Harvey A. K. Whitney Lecture Award is known as "health-system pharmacy's highest honor."

Abraham, Antonio Tabilio, Massimo Martelli, Shigetaka Asano, Alberto Donfrancesco, 2012-12-06 This volume of Molecular Biology of Hematopoiesis is dedicated to many international scientists and clinicians for their contribution to the field of Hematology Oncology presented at the 11th International Symposium on Molecular Biology of Hematopoiesis which was held in Bormio Italy June 25 29 1998 The continuous support of the Presidents of the meeting Professor F Takaku President of Jichi University and E D Thomas Nobel Laureate was greatly acknowledged especially Professor Takaku for his vision and support for development of gene therapy in Japan New information on BMT for autoimmune disease and organ transplantation was presented at the symposium and is published in this volume Several new findings on gene therapy transfer into HSC were presented by E F Vanin and A Nienhuis K Humphries 1 A Nolte H E Heslop and M K Brenner Professors S Asano and K Tani presented new studies on gene transfer into primates Among the highlights were the new papers on gene transfer presented by G Wage maker N G Abraham and M Onodera from R M Blaese's group The use of BMT for organ transplant and autoimmune disease was updated and a representative paper is presented in this volume Hyperbolic Manifolds and Discrete Groups Michael

Kapovich, 2009-08-04 The main goal of the book is to present a proof of the following Thurston's Hyperbolization Theorem The Big Monster Suppose that M is a compact atoroidal Haken 3 manifold that has zero Euler characteristic Then the interior of M admits a complete hyperbolic metric of finite volume This theorem establishes a strong link between the geometry and topology of 3 manifolds and the algebra of discrete subgroups of $Isom \mathbb{H}^3$ It completely changed the landscape of 3 dimensional topology and theory of Kleinian groups Further it allowed one to prove things that were beyond the reach of the standard 3 manifold technique as for example Smith's conjecture residual finiteness of the fundamental groups of Haken manifolds etc In this book we present a complete proof of the Hyperbolization Theorem in the generic case Initially we planned 1 including a detailed proof in the remaining case of manifolds fibered over as well However since Otal's book Ota96 which treats the fiber bundle case became available only a sketch of the proof in the fibered case will be given here

Epistemic Stance in English Conversation Elise Kärkkäinen, 2003 This book is the first corpus based description of epistemic stance in conversational American English It argues for epistemic stance as a pragmatic rather than semantic notion showing commitment to the status of information is an emergent interactive activity rooted in the interaction between conversational co participants The first major part of the book establishes the highly regular and routinized nature of such stance marking in the data The second part offers a micro analysis of I think the prototypical stance marker in its sequential and activity contexts Adopting the methodology of conversation analysis and paying serious attention to the manifold prosodic cues attendant in the speakers utterances the study offers novel situated interpretations of I think The author also argues for intonation units as a unit of social interaction and makes observations about the grammaticization patterns of the most frequent epistemic markers notably the status of I think as a discourse marker and mythology surrounding tube amplifiers in the guitar world For years experts have argued over the tiny details of exactly how they do what they do and how their various components interact What s undeniable is that far more than being just a loudness booster the unique combination of tubes capacitors resistors and transformers in these amps can contribute enormously to the quality of sound derived from any electric guitar In this thorough and authoritative book Dave Hunter cuts through the marketing hyperbole and the blind faith and supplies all the information you need to choose the right amp and get the best from it The book also features exclusively conducted in depth interviews with leading figures in the tube amp building world including Ken Fischer Mark Sampson and Michael Zaite and even provides full instructions on how to construct your own high quality tube guitar amp from scratch Language in Time Peter Auer, Elizabeth

Couper-Kuhlen, Frank Muller, 1999-08-26 The authors here promote the reintroduction of temporality into the description and analysis of spoken interaction They argue that spoken words are in fact temporal objects and that unless linguists consider how they are delivered within the context of time they will not capture the full meaning of situated language use Their approach is rigorously empirical with analyses of English German and Italian rhythm all grounded in sequences of actual talk in interaction

Marketing and Christian Proclamation in Theological Perspective Emily Beth Hill, 2021-06-28 In today's market driven world the contemporary church faces pressing questions as it continues to be formed by the powerful forces of neoliberal capitalism This book builds on theological examinations of capitalism and consumerism to develop a theology of marketing that addresses two key questions First even though church marketing seems to help churches grow amidst a climate of declining church affiliation should the church use it Second considering the church's indistinguishability from culture in relation to consumption how should Christians relate to material goods To address these questions Emily Beth Hill develops a framework that draws on the concrete practices of marketing such as focus groups big data branding and advertising and the trajectory of their use over time along with Martin Luther's theology of the Word Combining Martin Luther's pro me for me theology with marketing concepts Hill shows that while marketing and the gospel have formal pro me similarities materially they are quite different marketing operates as a word of law distinct from the effective liberating word of the gospel proclaimed for us and thus the two produce different human identities While existing examinations of capitalism primarily rely on theologies and discourses of desire Hill reveals that a theology of the Word illuminates a fruitful new area for reflection on how the church can resist the deformations of capitalism
