The History of American Higher Education Roger L. Geiger, 2016-09-06 This book tells the compelling saga of American higher education from the founding of Harvard College in 1636 to the outbreak of World War II The author traces how colleges and universities were shaped by the shifting influences of culture the emergence of new career opportunities and the unrelenting advancement of knowledge He describes how colonial colleges developed a unified yet diverse educational tradition capable of weathering the social upheaval of the Revolution as well as the evangelical fervor of the Second Great Awakening He shows how the character of college education in different regions diverged significantly in the years leading up to the Civil War for example the state universities of the antebellum South were dominated by the sons of planters and their culture and how higher education was later revolutionized by the land grant movement the growth of academic professionalism and the transformation of campus life by students By the beginning of the Second World War the standard American university had taken shape setting the stage for the postwar education boom The author moves through each era exploring the growth of higher education

A Critical History of Contemporary Architecture Elie G. Haddad, David Rifkind, 2016-12-05 1960 following as it did the last CIAM meeting signalled a turning point for the Modern Movement From then on architecture was influenced by seminal texts by Aldo Rossi and Robert Venturi and gave rise to the first revisionary movement following Modernism Bringing together leading experts in the field this book provides a comprehensive critical overview of the developments in architecture from 1960 to 2010 It consists of two parts the first section providing a presentation of major movements in architecture after 1960 and the second a geographic survey that covers a wide range of territories around the world This book not only reflects the different perspectives of its various authors but also charts a middle course between the aesthetic histories that examine architecture solely in terms of its formal aspects and the more ideological histories that subject it to a critique that often skirts the discussion of its formal aspects

American Academic Cultures Paul H. Mattingly, 2017-11-23 At a time when American higher education seems ever more to be reflecting on its purpose and potential we are more inclined than ever to look to its history for context and inspiration But that history only helps Paul H Mattingly argues if it is seen as something more than a linear progress through time With American Academic Cultures he offers a different type of history of American higher learning showing how its current state is the product of different varied generational cultures each grounded in its own moment in time and driven by historically distinct values that generated specific problems and responses Mattingly sketches out seven broad generational cultures evangelical Jeffersonian republican nondenominational industrially driven progressively pragmatic internationally minded and the current corporate model What we see through his close analysis of each of these cultures in their historical moments is that the politics of higher education both inside and outside institutions are ultimately driven by the dominant culture of the time By looking at the history of higher education in this new way Mattingly opens our eyes to our own moment and the part its culture plays in generating its politics and promise

Seasholes, 2018-04-20 Why and how Boston was transformed by landmaking Fully one sixth of Boston is built on made land Although other waterfront cities also have substantial areas that are built on fill Boston probably has more than any city in North America In Gaining Ground historian Nancy Seasholes has given us the first complete account of when why and how this land was created The story of landmaking in Boston is presented geographically each chapter traces landmaking in a different part of the city from its first permanent settlement to the present Seasholes introduces findings from recent archaeological investigations in Boston and relates landmaking to the major historical developments that shaped it At the beginning of the nineteenth century landmaking in Boston was spurred by the rapid growth that resulted from the burgeoning China trade The influx of Irish immigrants in the mid nineteenth century prompted several large projects to create residential land not for the Irish but to keep the taxpaying Yankees from fleeing to the suburbs Many landmaking projects were undertaken to cover tidal flats that had been polluted by raw sewage discharged directly onto them removing the pestilential exhalations thought to cause illness Land was also added for port developments public parks and transportation facilities including the largest landmaking project of all the airport A separate chapter discusses the technology of landmaking in Boston explaining the basic method used to make land and the changes in its various components over time The book is copiously illustrated with maps that show the original shoreline in relation to today s streets details from historical maps that trace the progress of landmaking and historical drawings and photographs
