A. Pigott,1990 Financial Intermediation in Europe Luke Drago Spajic,2012-12-06 Two items were firmly on the European economic agenda in the 1990s financial market integration and the creation of a common or single currency The former was supposed to have been achieved in 1992 via the Single Market Act with some derogations and the latter came into being on January 1 1999 This study is concerned with a particular connection between the two themes namely the process of financial intermediation and especially the role of banking 1 1 Financial Monetary Integration in Europe Up until the mid 1980s European financial intermediation was as elsewhere on shore in the post war period broadly characterised by a relatively high degree of diverse regulatory control and with cross border restrictions e g in the form of exchange controls This resulted in the administration of interest rates and pegging of prime market yields as well as restrictions on intermediary specialisation Hence it was easy to understand why price competition was hardly ever seen Within this kind of environment banks and other financial intermediaries OFIs competed mainly on non price terms for example through the expansion of branch networks The Single Market Programme SMP I launched in 1986 was in a complex way intended to level out and open up the domestic markets of the European Union EU to competition from entities in other Member States

World Economic and Financial Surveys International Monetary Fund,1991-01-01 This paper presents the annual survey of international capital market developments and prospects It summarizes recent developments in capital market flows and asset prices including the initial impact of the Middle East crisis and reviews the main ongoing structural changes in financial markets A sharp fall in net investment in foreign securities by Japanese institutions in 1990 in the face of narrowing interest rate differentials and in some cases the need to cover losses stemming from the fall in the Japanese stock market In contrast the importance of net direct investment outflows as a counterpart to the current account surplus began increasing as from 1989 The crisis in the Middle East resulted in a further tightening of market conditions especially for less creditworthy borrowers A general preference for safer and more liquid financial instruments was reflected in increased spreads between corporate and government securities on national markets and between private sector Eurobonds and government securities denominated in the same currency on international markets Financial Econometrics Modeling:

Derivatives Pricing, Hedge Funds and Term Structure Models G. Gregoriou, R. Pascalau, 2015-12-26 This book proposes new tools and models to price options assess market volatility and investigate the market efficiency hypothesis In particular it considers new models for hedge funds and derivatives of derivatives and adds to the literature of testing for the efficiency of markets both theoretically and empirically Regional Financial Spillovers Across Europe Ms. Silvia

Sgherri, Mr. Alessandro Galesi, 2009-02-01 The recent financial crisis raises important issues about the transmission of financial shocks across borders In this paper a global vector autoregressive GVAR model is constructed to assess the relevance of international spillovers following a historical slowdown in U S equity prices The GVAR model contains 27 country specific models including the United States 17 European advanced economies and 9 European emerging economies Each country model is linked to the others by a set of country specific foreign variables computed using bilateral bank lending exposures Results reveal considerable comovements of equity prices across mature financial markets However the effects on credit growth are found to be country specific Evidence indicates that asset prices are the main channel through which in the short run financial shocks are transmitted internationally while the contribution of other variables like the cost and quantity of credit becomes more important over longer horizons
