

The knowledge of the different types of figure does not 'add up' somehow to a kind of inductive knowledge of figure in general. [...] Even more forcefully, figure is the context in which definition and delimitation are the same thing, for to give a definition of a figure is to give its boundary and to give its boundary is to give the figure as 'definition' and as 'boundary'). The notion of figure links the particular figures to be studied to the general problem of relating limitation to what is delimited in the case of surfaces. At the same time the notion of figure provides the method by which these examples of bounding are to be known.

The Rhetorlogue John Demosthenes N. Ruffin, 1922 Quintilian's Institutes of Oratory Quintilian, 1902

Metanoia Adam Ellwanger, 2020-02-25 Western culture is in a moment when wholly new kinds of personal transformations are possible but authentic transformation requires both personal testimony and public recognition In this book Adam Ellwanger takes a distinctly rhetorical approach to analyzing how the personal and the public relate to an individual's transformation and develops a new vocabulary that enables a critical assessment of the concept of authenticity The concept of metanoia is central to this project Charting the history of metanoia from its original use in the classical tradition to its adoption by early Christians as a term for religious conversion Ellwanger shows that metanoia involves a change within a person that results in a truer version of him or herself a change in character or ethos He then applies this theory to our contemporary moment finding that metanoia provides unique insight into modern forms of self transformation Drawing on ancient and medieval sources including Thucydides Plato Paul the Apostle and Augustine as well as contemporary discourses of self transformation such as the public testimonies of Caitlyn Jenner and Rachel Dolezal Ellwanger elucidates the role of language in signifying and authenticating identity Timely and original Ellwanger's study formulates a transhistorical theory of personal transformation that will be of interest to scholars working in social theory philosophy rhetoric and the history of Christianity
