The Future of Training in Psychotherapy and Counselling John Rowan,2014-02-25 The Future of Training in Psychotherapy and Counselling presents a revealing and stimulating account of the current state of training that demonstrates how training will have to adapt if it is to sucessfully meet the needs and challenges of the future In an attempt to look afresh at the whole question of training John Rowan proposes that there are three ways of doing therapy and any examination of training has to consider each of these the instrumental where the main emphasis is on the treating the client or patient the authentic way where the main emphasis is on meeting the client or patient the transpersonal way where main emphasis is on linking with the client in a more personal way Each approach makes different assumptions about the self about the relationship and about the level of consciousness involved in doing therapy By challenging the basic precepts of traditional training John Rowan encourages the reader to reconsider subjects including the difference between counselling and psychotherapy culture and ethics the origins of disturbance in clients and child development The Future of Training in Psychotherapy and Counselling provides a much needed new perspective that will compel all psychotherapists and counsellors to take a closer look at training in the field

The Therapeutic Relationship Petruska Clarkson, 2003-11-07 This text provides coverage of the uses and abuses of the therapeutic relationship in counselling psychology psychotherapy and related fields It provides a framework for integration pluralism or deepening singularity with reference to five kinds of therapeutic relationship potentially available in every kind of counselling or psychodynamic work The work incorporates training and supervision perspectives and examples of course design uses in assessment and applications to group and couples as well as to organizations Dealing with an issue of increasing complexity the book should be of value and significance to psychotherapists psychoanalysts clinical and counselling psychologists and other professionals working in the field of helping human relationships such as doctors social workers teachers and counsellors
