Handbook of Adolescent Health Risk Behavior Ralph J. DiClemente, William B. Hansen, Lynn E. Ponton, 2013-11-21

Adolescence is a developmental period of accelerating physical psychological social cultural and cognitive development often characterized by confronting and surmounting a myriad of challenges and establishing a sense of self identity and autonomy It is also unfortunately a period fraught with many threats to the health and well being of adolescents and with substantial consequent impairment and disability Many of the adverse health consequences experienced by adolescents are to a large extent the result of their risk behaviors Many adolescents today and perhaps an increasing number in the future are at risk for death disease and other adverse health outcomes that are not primarily biomedical in origin In general there has been a marked change in the causes of morbidity and mortality among adolescents Previously infectious diseases accounted for a disproportionate share of adolescent morbidity and mortality At present however the overwhelming toll of adolescent morbidity and mortality is the result of lifestyle practices

Britt, Michael R. Gottfredson, 2017-11-30 For the past twenty to thirty years control theories of crime have been at the center of theoretical development in criminology Key to the control theory perspective is the notion that crime is an inherently individual act and its explanation requires that we focus on the characteristics of individuals who commit crimes Consequently control theory focuses on such issues as self control and social control The contributions to this volume explicate and extend the application of control theory It is divided into three general areas Part 1 focuses on key assumptions and components of control theories Contributors discuss the notion of learning or socialization in the context of control theory and the effects that families peers and the criminal justice system have on self control social ties and criminal behavior Part 2 applies control theory to areas typically assumed to be out of the domain of self control theory and social control theory such as gender differences in crime domestic violence and group crime Considering control theory's emphasis on explaining individual criminal acts these chapters suggest an interesting area of development by highlighting the possibility that differences in crime across or within groups may begin with individual characteristics and then making inferences about groups and group processes Part 3 approaches the explanation of crime cross nationally and at the macro level Although the authors take different approaches they all illustrate that a theory of crime does not require culture specific elements in order to be a valid cross cultural explanation Contributors to this volume include Robert Agnew Todd Armstrong Leana Allen Bouffard Augustine Brannigan Chester Britt Barbara Costello Maja Dekovic Matt DeLisi Michael Gottfredson Henriette Haas Kelly H Hardwick Travis Hirschi Marianne Junger Martin Killias Helen Mederer Kevin Thompson and Alexander Vazsonyi The Reality of Research with Children and Young People Vicky Lewis, Mary Kellett, Chris Robinson, Sandy Fraser, Sharon Ding, 2012-06-21 The Reality of Research with Children and Young People illustrates the process of carrying out research through thirteen research stories Each story includes a piece of published research accompanied by a commentary from the author of the research explaining the origins of the research how research questions were formed factors influencing the choice of methodology and data collection techniques problems that arose and how these were dealt with personal reflections on the project The research examples included in this volume have been carefully selected to demonstrate the reality of researching with children from pre school age to late adolescence They reflect the different traditions and variety of methods of collecting data including interview evaluation ethnography experiment survey

The Nature and Development of Decision-making James P. Byrnes,2013-04-15 Although everyone has goals only some people successfully attain their respective goals on a regular basis With this in mind the author attempts to answer the question of why some people are more successful than others He begins with the assumption that the key to personal success is effective decision making and then utilizes his own theory The Self Regulation Model to explain the origin and nature of individual differences in decision making competence The author also summarizes a number of existing models of decision making and risk taking This book has two primary goals to provide a comprehensive review of the developmental literature on the decision making skills of children adolescents and adults and to propose a theoretical model of decision making skill that offers a better description of this skill than prior accounts Taken together the literature review and theoretical model help the reader acquire a clear sense of the development of decision making skills as well as reasons for the developmental differences that seem to emerge

Raczynski,Ralph J. DiClemente,2013-11-11 The idea for this volume developed when we were co teaching our introductory master's level course in the Department of Health Behavior at the UAB School of Public Health a core course for all masters of public health students in the school regardless of the department in which they enrolled or the focus of their studies Hence in the course we sought to provide both students in our department as well as those who might not ever again take a health behavior course with an overview that would both truly represent the field and substantially provide educational research and public health practice benefits This was and continues to be a challenge with the diversity of students specializing in fields that include not only health behavior but also biostatistics environmental health sciences epidemiology health care organization and policy international health and maternal and child health The course that we taught attempted to provide the students with an overview of some of the important health promotion and disease prevention theories methods and policy issues while reviewing applications of these theories and methods to promoting health and preventing disease through a variety of channels for a variety of disease outcomes and among a variety of populations Since no one text provided this variety of readings we depended on readings and guest lectures Crime, HIV and Health: Intersections of Criminal Justice and Public Health Concerns Bill Sanders,Yonette F. Thomas,Bethany Griffin Deeds,2012-09-12 Carefully selected to reflect the latest research at the interface between public health and criminal justice in the US these contributions each focus on an aspect of the relationship How for example might a person s criminal activity adversely affect their health or their risk of exposure to HIV infection The issues addressed in this volume are at the heart of policy in both public health and criminal justice The authors track a four fold connection between the two fields exploring the mental and physical health of incarcerated populations the health consequences of crime substance abuse violence and risky sexual behaviors the extent to which high crime rates are linked to poor health outcomes in the same neighborhood and the results of public health interventions among traditional criminal justice populations As well as exploring these urgent issues this anthology features a wealth of remarkable interdisciplinary contributions that see public health researchers focusing on crime while criminologists attend to public health issues The papers provide empirical data tracking for example the repercussions on public health of a fear of crime among residents of high crime neighborhoods and the correlations between HIV status and outcomes and an individual s history of criminal activity Providing social scientists and policy makers with vital pointers on how the criminal justice and public health sectors might work together on the problems common to both this collection breaks new ground by combining the varying perspectives of a number of key disciplines
