Handbook of Clinical Behavior Therapy with Adults Alan S. Bellack, Michel Hersen, 2012-12-06 Despite the occasional outcries to the contrary the field of behavior therapy is still growing and the asymptote has not been reached yet The umbrella of behavior therapy continues to enlarge and still is able to encompass new theories new concepts new research new data and new clinical techniques Although the number of new behavioral journals now has stabilized we still see a proliferation of books on the subject In the past few years however we have seen considerable specialization within behavior therapy No longer is it possible to be a generalist and remain fully abreast of all the relevant developments Thus we see behavior therapists who deal with adults those who deal with children those whose specialty is hospital psychiatry and those who see themselves as practitioners of behavioral medicine Even within a subarea such as behavioral medicine specialization runs supreme to the extent that there are experts in the specific addictions adult medical problems and child medical problems Given the extent of specialization there are numerous ways to skin the proverbial cat We therefore have chosen to look at the contemporary work in behavior therapy that is being carried out with adults in part of course because of our long standing interest in this area as teachers researchers and clinicians In so doing we have chosen to highlight the clinical aspects of the endeavor but not at the expense of the rich research heritage for each of the specific adult disorders

Continuous Hemofiltration in the Intensive Care Unit Didier Journois, 1997-09-01 Hemofiltration is now recognised as the optimal therapeutic solution for supplying renal function in patients with acute renal failure associated with poor hemodynamic conditions This situation is often observed in patients with severe impairment in the function of one or several other organs Since its introduction in the intensive care units in the 1970s hemofiltration has been subject to some major improvements regarding the required material and devices such as catheters lines filters or pumps This progress has been accompanied by a better knowledge of the management of patients undergoing the technique especially concerning nutritional support drug administration control of body temperature as well as fluid and electrolytes balance or cost control Moreover some additional beneficial effects of hemofiltration have been recently pointed out suggesting that this technique could provide more than an already efficient renal support by removing some substances responsible for an exagger
