Japanese Assimilation Policies in Colonial Korea, 1910-1945 Mark E. Caprio, 2011-07-01 From the late nineteenth century Japan sought to incorporate the Korean Peninsula into its expanding empire Japan took control of Korea in 1910 and ruled it until the end of World War II During this colonial period Japan advertised as a national goal the assimilation of Koreans into the Japanese state It never achieved that goal Mark Caprio here examines why Japan s assimilation efforts failed Utilizing government documents personal travel accounts diaries newspapers and works of fiction he uncovers plenty of evidence for the potential for assimilation but very few practical initiatives to implement the policy Japan s early history of colonial rule included tactics used with peoples such as the Ainu and Ryukyuan that tended more toward obliterating those cultures than to incorporating the people as equal Japanese citizens Following the annexation of Taiwan in 1895 Japanese policymakers turned to European imperialist models especially those of France and England in developing strengthening its plan for assimilation policies But although Japanese used rhetoric that embraced assimilation Japanese people themselves from the top levels of government down considered Koreans inferior and gave them few political rights Segregation was built into everyday life Japanese maintained separate communities in Korea children were schooled in two separate and unequal systems there was relatively limited intermarriage and prejudice was ingrained Under these circumstances many Koreans resisted assimilation By not actively promoting Korean Japanese integration on the ground Japan s rhetoric of assimilation remained just that

Education in Tokugawa Japan Ronald Dore, 2010-11-01 Japanese cultural life had reached a low ebb at the beginning of the Tokugawa period The Japanese society which emerged when Tokugawa Ieyasu had completed the process of pacifying warring baronies was neither literary nor hardly literate The rulers were warriors and the people they ruled were largely illiterate The Japan of 1868 was a very different society practically every samurai was literate and it was a world in which books abounded The transformation which had occurred in these two and a half centuries was an essential precondition for the success of the policy which the leaders of the Meiji Restoration were to adopt An in depth survey of the development and education during the period this book remains one of the key analyses of the effects of Tokugawa educators and education on modern day Japan
