

Educational Theatre Management: a Panacea to Business Essay

Introduction

The Business Dictionary defines management as a factor of production, which consists of interlocking functions of creating corporate policy and organising, planning, controlling and directing an organisations resources in order to achieve the objectives of the company policy (2019).

Management is the wheel that drives an organisation, company and business to its desired goal which is to break even. Prior to the 19th Century, organisations were disorder in their management processes because the major focus was on manufacturing alone. The process of transferring the manufactured goods to the consumers was not given priority, which led to a lot of waste and chaotic situation (Joe Taylor Jr, 2019). Going by the Business history, Taylor was the first business leader to introduce the three core principles of management and leadership that are still in use till today. He revolutionized the management aspect of his company by introducing the standardized processes and measurement of performance principles, which are scientific techniques of measuring individual performance.

According to the 5000BC Sumerians records the Egyptian pyramids, the great China wall, the Colosseum in Rome and the Taj Mahal in India were all evidences of the ancient management skills (Dawas Sharma, 2013)

The formal study of management started in the 19th century as an advocacy by Frederick. W. Taylor (1856-1915). He advocated that it was the duty of management to design jobs, provide incentives to enhance workers' abilities to achieve higher productivity at work place. This scientific approach to management brought economic liberation and transformation from entrepreneurial capitalism to managerial capitalism. It brought about rapid industrial growth, established generally accepted method of performance of employee and developed payment system that provided a reward for workers' performance. Based on Fayols approach Engineers and managers of French miners came to the conclusion that management was an activity common to all human undertakings home, business, government, school and that all these undertakings needed five basic administrative functions to be effective (Diwas Shama Man; Mohan Mishra, 2013).
