Gordon Parks Philip Brookman, Peter Kunhardt, 2018-10 Focusing on new research and access to forgotten pictures The New Tide Early Work 1940-1950 documents the importance of these years in shaping Gordon Parks' passionate vision. The book brings together photographs and publications made during the first and most formative decade of his 65 year career. During the 1940s Parks' photographic ambitions grew to express a profound understanding of his social, cultural, and political experiences. From the first photographs he published in Saint Paul, Minnesota, and his relationship to the Chicago Black Renaissance to his mentorship with Roy Stryker and his breakthrough work for America's influential picture magazines, including Ebony and Life, this book traces Parks' rapid evolution from an accomplished self-taught practitioner to a groundbreaking artistic and journalistic voice. We are with the new tide. We stand at the crossroads. We watch each new procession. The hot wires carry urgent appeals. Print compels us. Voices are speaking. Men are moving. And we shall be with them. Richard Wright, 12 Million Black Voices: A Folk History of the Negro in the United States 1941

Invisible Man Michal Raz-Russo, 2016 By the mid 1940s Gordon Parks had cemented his reputation as a successful photojournalist and magazine photographer, and Ralph Ellison was an established author working on his first novel Invisible Man 1952, which would go on to become one of the most acclaimed books of the twentieth century. Less well known, however, is that their vision of racial injustices, coupled with a shared belief in the communicative power of photography, inspired collaboration on two important projects in 1948 and 1952. Capitalizing on the growing popularity of the picture press, Parks and Ellison first joined forces on an essay titled Harlem Is Nowhere for 48 The Magazine of the Year. Conceived while Ellison was already three years into writing Invisible Man, this illustrated essay was centered on the Lafargue Clinic, the first nonsegregated psychiatric clinic in New York City, as a case study for the social and economic conditions in Harlem. He chose Parks to create the accompanying photographs, and during the winter months of 1948 the two roamed the streets of Harlem together, with Parks photographing under the guidance of Ellison's writing. In 1952 they worked together again on A Man Becomes Invisible for the August 25 issue of Life magazine, which promoted Ellison's newly released novel Invisible Man. Gordon Parks and Ralph Ellison in Harlem focuses on these two projects, neither of which was published as originally intended, and provides an in-depth look at the authors' shared vision of black life in America, with Harlem as its nerve center.
