Modern Clan Politics Edward Schatz, 2012-09-01 Edward Schatz explores the politics of kin based clan divisions in the post Soviet state of Kazakhstan Drawing from extensive ethnographic and archival research interviews and wide ranging secondary sources he highlights a politics that poses a two tiered challenge to current thinking about modernity and Central Asia First asking why kinship divisions do not fade from political life with modernization he shows that the state actually constructs clan relationships by infusing them with practical political and social meaning By activating the most important quality of clans their concealability the state is itself responsible for the vibrant politics of these subethnic divisions which has emerged and flourished in post Soviet Kazakhstan Subethnic divisions are crucial to understanding how group solidarities and power relations coexist and where they intersect But in a second challenge to current thinking Schatz argues that clan politics should not be understood simply as competition among primordial groups Rather the meanings attributed to clan relationships both the public stigmas and the publicly proclaimed pride in clans are part and parcel of this contest Drawing parallels with relevant cases from the Middle East East and North Africa and other parts of the former USSR Schatz concludes that a more appropriate policy may be achieved by making clans a legitimate part of political and social life rendering them less powerful or corrupt by increasing their transparency Political scientists sociologists anthropologists policy makers and others who study state power and identity groups will find a wealth of empirical material and conceptual innovation for discussion and debate

The traditional picture of a Victorian public school assumes that it was founded on Thomas Arnold Tom Brown's Schooldays and Rugby football A Rifle Corps Oxbridge Blues on the teaching staff and an ethos of esprit de corps were all part of the system The cult of athleticism reigned supreme This was not the case at Uppingham School during Edward Thring's headmastership from 1853 to 1887 Here a balanced physical education of gymnastics athletics games swimming and country pursuits flourished within a sane but revolutionary educational framework Thring's Uppingham however was an Athens surrounded by Spartan strongholds The Spartans were kept at bay during Thring's lifetime but after his death they closed in and even claimed Thring as one of their own His ideals were hijacked by the sportsmen and then perverted by the militarists Thring's theory and practice of physical education lived on outside the traditional public schools was adopted by the progressive school movement and eventually found acceptance in all good schools Its legacy can be found in the first National Curriculum for Physical Education and in all schools that value physical education as a vital ingredient of holistic education This book will
