Daniel M. N. Mcdikkoh,2010 The Diffusion of Medical Innovations Mary L. Fennell,Richard B. Warnecke,2013-03-08 This book has several objectives Most basically it presents an approach to assessing interorganizational innovation diffusion To do this we have tried to link contemporary organizational theory with more person centered diffusion theory We have also combined contingency theory with the resource dependence perspective to explain why organizations might choose to initially consider an innovation re define it to suit their particular environmental context and then implement it Another objective has been to examine how environmental constraints can limit the ways in which diffusion channels form and can determine when diffusion can be truly organizational and when it will depend upon individuals In doing so we have tried to indicate how organizational structures emerge to manage resources in ways that are consistent with those environmental constraints We have borrowed the notion of boundary management from resource dependence and we have used it to examine how organizations use various boundary management strategies to preserve their autonomy in exchange relationships with other organizations We have done this both at the network level and at the level of individual organizations Innovations in Health Service Delivery Alexander S. Preker,April Harding,2003 As the largest expenditure category of the health systems in both industrialised and developing countries hospital care provision has been the focus of reforms over recent decades This publication reviews recent trends in hospital policy reforms and options around the world and includes case studies which offer insights into lessons learned Issues considered include differences in income levels cultural settings and market environments organisational changes such as increased management autonomy and privatisation the need for parallel reforms and effective evaluation mechanisms Social Work Practice in Healthcare Karen M.
