

Hazard Communication Standard Pictogram

The Hazard Communication Standard (HCS) requires pictograms on labels to alert users of the chemical hazards to which they may be exposed. Each pictogram consists of a symbol on a white background framed within a red border and represents a distinct hazard(s). The pictogram on the label is determined by the chemical hazard classification.

Model Plans and Programs for the OSHA Bloodborne Pathogens and Hazard Communications Standards U. S. Department Labor, Occupational Administration, 2014-02-26 The mission of the Occupational Health and Safety Administration OSHA is to save lives prevent injuries and protect the health of America s workers As part of the Department of Labor OSHA promotes worker safety and health in every workplace in the United States OSHA s bloodborne pathogens standard protects employees who work in occupations where they are at risk of exposure to blood or other potentially infectious materials OSHA s hazard communication standard protects employees who may be exposed to hazardous chemicals Both standards require employers to develop written documents to explain how they will implement each standard provide training to employees and protect the health and safety of their workers This publication includes a model exposure control plan to meet the requirements of the OSHA bloodborne pathogens standard and a model hazard communication program to meet the requirements of the hazard communication standard These model documents can be used as templates for your own workplace exposure control plan and hazard communication program but you must tailor them to the specific requirements of your establishment These sample plans contain all elements required by the bloodborne pathogens and hazard communication standards so you should not eliminate any items when converting them for your own use Your written plans must be accessible to all employees either on line or in an area where they are available for review on all shifts This publication provides general guidance on preparing written plans required by OSHA standards but should not be considered a definitive interpretation for compliance with OSHA requirements The reader should consult the OSHA bloodborne pathogens and hazard communication standards in their entirety for specific compliance requirements

S. Department Labor,Occupational Administration,2012-06-22 OSHA 3084 Chemical Hazard Communication discusses how under the provisions of the Hazard Communications Standard employers are responsible for informing employees of the hazards and the identities of workplace chemicals to which they are exposed About 32 million workers work with and are potentially exposed to one or more chemical hazards There are an estimated 650 000 existing chemical products and hundreds of new ones being introduced annually This poses a serious problem for exposed workers and their employers Chemical exposure may cause or contribute to many serious health effects such as heart ailments central nervous system kidney and lung damage sterility cancer burns and rashes Some chemicals may also be safety hazards and have the potential to cause fires and explosions and other serious accidents Because of the seriousness of these safety and health problems and because many employers and employees know little or nothing about them the Occupational Safety and Health Administration OSHA issued the Hazard Communication Standard The basic goal of the standard is to be sure employers and employees know about work hazards and how to protect themselves this should help to reduce the incidence of chemical source illness and injuries The Hazard Communication Standard establishes uniform requirements to make sure that the hazards of all chemicals imported into produced or used in U S workplaces are evaluated and that this hazard information is transmitted to affected employers and exposed employees Employers and employees covered by an OSHA approved state safety and health plan should check with their state agency which may be enforcing standards and other procedures at least as effective as but not always identical to federal requirements Basically the hazard communication standard is different from other OSHA health rules because it covers all hazardous chemicals This rule also incorporates a downstream flow of information which means that producers of chemicals have the primary responsibility for generating and disseminating information whereas users of chemicals must obtain the information and transmit it to their own employees

The DLA Hazard Communication Program ,1988      Training Programs AA. Capuano,1986 The Occupational Safety and Health Administration OSHA Hazard Communication standard was developed to ensure that workers understand the hazards of substances in their workplace The key to accomplishing this objective is through effective industrial training programs Industry while desiring performance language in OSHA standards appears confused with the performance language of the Hazard Communication standard Effective compliance can only be achieved through an understanding of the standard and the personality of one s company Although many of the standard s requirements are unique many other requirements have been performed for years by industry The confusion performance language is creating has become a roadblock to effective compliance A thorough analysis of the standard and company needs coupled with a logical approach to compliance in a timely manner is essential
