problems To what extent do explanatory factors vary with age How accurately can boys with different outcomes be identified by risk scores based on hierarchical multiple regressions To what extent are explanatory factors associated with one outcome that are also associated with other outcomes Are explanatory factors that are especially characteristic of a multiproblem group of boys who display many different problem behaviors different from explanatory factors associated with boys with few problems Do the results fit a general theory of juvenile problem behaviors or is a differentiated theory more applicable

Emotion, Cognition, Health, and Development in Children and Adolescents Elizabeth J. Susman, Lynne V. Feagans, William J. Ray, 2013-05-13 This book focuses on integrating health and developmental issues in children and adolescents Its primary objective is to demonstrate how development of emotions and cognition are involved in promoting health preventing disease and altering disease processes A related objective is to show how disease processes may alter the course of development These objectives are accomplished through the efforts of chapter authors who illustrate that developmental theories are useful in guiding research and producing findings that explain how health and development are reciprocally intertwined This volume differs from others in terms of its developmental theoretical perspectives and related findings Most previous work on integrating health and behavior has shown relationships between the two but has not been designed to explain the processes that link these two phenomena The theoretical perspectives on which the current chapters are based show how emotional and cognitive developmental processes may alter health and disease outcomes The entire volume is further strengthened because the theories and findings are based on multidisciplinary perspectives making the volume of interest to a broad array of disciplines Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 1992: Department of Education United States.
