09-2023

Introduction

This guidance is aimed at anyone involved in motor vehicle repair and maintenance (MVRM). It covers the main causes of injuries and ill health and explains some of the precautions you can take to prevent them.

MVRM is considered as a high-risk work activity. Many people are injured and killed every year while working in vehicle maintenance workshops or attending to off-site service, repair and vehicle recovery activities.

The nature of the work means there is a risk of severe injury or death. Some risks are obvious, such as vehicles falling from hoists or jacks, people being hit by a passing vehicle while carrying out roadside recovery and repairs.

Maintenance is defined as a combination of all technical, administrative and managerial actions during the life cycle of an item intended to retain it in, or restore it to, a state in which it can perform the required function¹.

or tyres exploding during inflation. Other risks are less obvious such as the long-term effects of breathing dusts or fumes from fuels, solvents and paints. While there may be many risks associated with this type of work, these risks can be avoided.

MVRM activities include:

- Inspection
- Setting
- Measurement
- Replacement
- Adjustment
- Repair
- audit detection
- Replacement of parts
- visiting

Making sure that identifying a responsible person, planning for the servicing and repair of vehicles, monitoring the condition of vehicles on delivery, and reporting any problems during working hours. This includes identifying a responsible person, planning for the servicing and repair of vehicles, monitoring the condition of vehicles on delivery, and reporting any problems during working hours.

Why is MVRM important?

MVRM influences the safety and health of workers in two ways.

- 1 Regular maintenance correctly planned and carried out is essential to keep vehicles safe and reliable.
- 2 Maintenance has to be performed in a safe way, with appropriate protection of maintenance workers and other people present in the workplace.
