Electronic Literacies Language Culture And Power In Online Education:

Electronic Literacies Mark Warschauer, 1998-11-01 Electronic Literacies is an insightful study of the challenges and contradictions that arise as culturally and linguistically diverse learners engage in new language and literacy practices in online environments. The role of the Internet in changing literacy and education has been a topic of much speculation but very little concrete research. This book is one of the first attempts to document the role of the Internet and other new digital technologies in the development of language and literacy. Warschauer looks at how the nature of reading and writing is changing and how those changes are being addressed in the classroom. His focus is on the experiences of culturally and linguistically diverse learners who are at special risk of being marginalized from the information society. Based on a two year ethnographic study of the uses of the Internet in four language and writing classrooms in the state of Hawaii: a Hawaiian language class of Native Hawaiian students seeking to revitalize their language and culture; an ESL class of students from Pacific Island and Latin American countries; an ESL class of students from Asian countries; and an English composition class of working class students from diverse ethnic backgrounds, the book includes data from interviews with students and teachers, classroom observations, and analysis of student texts. This rich ethnographic data is combined with theories from a broad range of disciplines to develop conclusions about the relationship of technology to language literacy education and culture. Central to Warschauer's discussion and conclusions is how contradictions of language culture and class affect the impact of Internet based education. While Hawaii is a special place, the issues confronted here are similar in many ways to those that exist throughout the United States and many other countries. How to provide culturally and linguistically diverse students traditionally on the educational and technological margins with the literacies they need to fully participate in public community and economic life in the 21st century. Language and Power. The Implications of Language for Peace and Development Birgit Brock-Utne, Gunnar Garbo, 2009-09-15 Language is a tool used to express thoughts to hide thoughts or to hide lack of thoughts It is often a means of domination The question is who has the power to define the world around us This book demonstrates how language is being manipulated to form the minds of listeners or readers Innocent words may be used to conceal a reality which people would have reacted to had the phenomena been described in a straightforward manner The nice and innocent concept cost sharing which leads our thoughts to communal sharing and solidarity may actually imply privatization The false belief that the best way to learn a foreign language is to have it as a language of instruction actually becomes a strategy for stupidification of African pupils In this book 33 independent experts from 16 countries in the North and the South show how language may be used to legitimize war making promote Northern interests in the field of development and retain colonial speech as languages of instruction languages of the courts and in politics The book has been edited by two Norwegians Birgit Brock Utne is a professor at the University of Oslo and a consultant in education and development From 1987 until 1992 she was a professor at the University of Dar es Salaam Gunnar Garbo author and journalist and former member of the Norwegian Parliament was the Norwegian Ambassador to Tanzania from 1987 to 1992
